PHD-DVP 952 Action Research and Practice Research

The course will introduce the historical background and development of action research and practice research, including participatory action research (PAR) and participatory practice research (PPR). In addition, research traditions, theories and methodological issues across a variety of disciplines are examined.

The course covers theories of science suited for positioning the epistemological and ontological grounding of action and practice research. Important questions include the following: What are the characteristics of actions research and practice research? Which view of knowledge builds the foundation for these research approaches? What possibilities for developing knowledge exist within different traditions in action research and practice research? What is the potential for carrying out innovative research?

The course includes knowledge on applying these research approaches in designing and developing the students' research projects. Designing an action or practice research that is manageable within the resources of a PhD project is given special attention. In addition, ethical challenges are highlighted and critically reflected on, such as power relations between researchers and other actors, anonymity and confidentiality, and conflicts in collaboration.

Compulsory assignments

Pre-course reading

It is expected that the participants are familiar with relevant literature before the course starts.

Pre-course paper

The participants must submit a presentation of their projects, their experiences from action research and practice research. The presentation will form the basis for discussion where active participation will be expected, both in presenting one's ideas and providing feedback on the ideas of others. The presentations must be written (1-2 pages) and submitted to the coordinators by May 6th, 2022. The presentations will be accessible for other students on Canvas.

Assessment

Submission of an essay. The word limit of the essay is 2000 +/- 10 % words.

Deadline for submission of essay: August 26th, 2022, in Inspira Assessment. The essay must fulfil source reference and quotation technique requirements. If the essay is awarded a fail grade, the candidate can submit a revised essay once, by a specific date.

More information about Inspira Assessment is found in the course pages at Canvas.

Satisfactory course attendance (minimum 80 %), project presentation and approved essay are necessary to obtain the 5 ECTS.

Opptakskrav

Admission requirements are that the applicants are registered as PhD students at higher education institutions. If seats are available, applicants who are part of Associate Professor Programs, or have a completed master's degree, may be considered for application. A certificate of the master's degree must be enclosed, as well as a summary, one page, with information about their research interest.

The program might be subject to change. The course is a fully on-campus course observing all necessary infection control measures. Should the pandemic situation change drastically, we will have to reconsider, but we hope and believe we will come together in 'real life'.

Admission for PhD students from non-Norwegian institutions

For admission, please send an email to erlend.from@vid.no providing the following information:
